BRILLIANT EFFECTS OF COLOR

Woman to Become an Animated Five-Barred Gates--Tramping the Housatonic Hills.

There is a tremor of premonition among the beeches breaming of winter, the poor decehes that cling to their rustling, paperish, ghost-like leaves, when all the other trees are hared to the snow, like wrinkled old dames who apo their vanished youth with mineing steps and shrill gabble of toothless silliments.

Winter in the back woods, like the old age of a foolish woman, is inexpressibly and We do not linger at enox for that, through something of the shivering creatures we may see at Christmas, some of us, before the curtains are drawn on Christmas cheer. But while russet and scarlet and gold and taway yellows paint the Houseionic hills, we linger in cool dawns and mellow twilights for the twilight of summer and the dawn of a new

In a word, we are transitional. Lenox is prospect and retrospect, memory and authoritation, with a sprinkle of good wholesome autumnal

We return to first principles. Con ing parties ply far from the railroad.
Gay parties, just sufficiently chaperoned, tramp the hills in garb of hard won simplicity. They say it is unnatural to speak naturally when more than three are together. Something more of skill and builtness is required In the sophisticated days to make a successful mountain-climbing gown than a more fall dress. Take the fine athletic creature of the gray blouse who strode so womanfully about the erest of the bowl. Think you her plain skirt, her plaited and belted blouse, her full but plain sleeves, the odd yoke, the Tam O'Shanter hat, were ental associates? Hardly so. It takes thought to provide this setting of sad grays and rustic russet for a pretty face and figure, to be framed in flitting gilmpses between dull tree trunks and flaming by. Our artist has studied her character and her mise en

These horizontal lines, these heavy black marks across the eye-picture which a fronk presents, are to be the mode's characteristics. Any architect, mode's characteristics. Any architect, any artist, any modiste, knows what that means. One is to seek amplitude at the expense of height, to build gowns with shades and frienes that they may seem more spacious. In divers ways the horizontal line is drawn; whether by heavy bands of velvet or satin trimming, or by hosts of ruffles and flounces, or by the impending, the arriving, the already triumphant over skirt. But in some way, get horizontal skirt. But in some way, get horizontal lines, lady, and thou wouldst be quite in the mode of modes.

Observe, again, the heavy transverse slashes of "color"—color in the artist's phrase; that is, shadow-drawn across another autumn dress with its barred skirt like a yellow jacket, its heavily-marked belt, the heavy horizontal lines at the collar and the flaring, sensa-nal shoulder lapels. Nature never intended woman to wear a belt. The figure flows, or should, in an undulating line of grace from shoulder to heel. These heavy horizontal effects making a woman look like a five-barred gate are barbarous. But what would you? Messieurs et mesdames the contouieres have spoken. Get thyself the five-barred monstrosity then, or better seven or seventy-barred, the thin sisters with joy, the stout with sad-ness. The flat has gone forth.

And therefore it may be said the belt -if beit must be-is best where there s least of it; that is, where it is narrowest. A typical dress for autumn and one which fulfills this requisite blossomed among the early novelties in a New York modiste's partor last week. It was made of a very thin blue serge-dark, rather than light, with a blouse bodice overhanging a mere line of white for the belt and with white vest and revers. The sleeve, were of the Garibaldi order, very loose and comfortable, and the whole costume was eloquent of the days when it is not too warm to walk or play tennis, but is decidedly too early to be back-or if back to return to one's usual occupations—in town. Another picture-que autumm cos-tume I saw on a hillside road this morning was of rough red serge-a red that fitted in well with the sumach and the cardinal flower and the first bright leaves. It had a broad black braid to hem the plain shirt and a nondescript bodice of some not noticeable sort with revers and double cables flowing about over it and making themselves
